PREFACE

This document presents the key between the 1978 and the 1969 preliminary editions of the Australian Standard Industrial Classification (ASIC).

The key shows for each industry in the 1978 edition of the ASIC (Catalogue No. 1201.0) the equivalent industry, or industries, in the 1969 preliminary edition of the Classification and explains any qualitative differences between them.

It is presented in three tables. Tables 1 and 2 provide an approximate or broad link between the individual industries in the two editions of the Classification - Table 1 presents this link for ASIC divisions and subdivisions while Table 2 presents it for ASIC groups and classes. Table 3 shows the detailed differences between the individual industry classes.

The key serves mainly as a source of information for analysing the differences between the two editions of the ASIC as well as any differences in the statistics compiled in accordance with them. However, by itself, the key is not necessarily the best means for fully or accurately assessing the quantitative impact on industry statistics of a changeover from the old to the new edition of the Classification. This is best done by classifying the same basic statistics according to both editions of the Classification and presenting the results in parallel or, so called, "bridging" tables as for the 1977-78 Mining and Manufacturing Censuses in which the 1978 edition of the ASIC was first introduced. In such cases the key serves to explain the quantitative differences revealed in the bridging tables.

Any inquiries about the key or the ASIC should be referred to the Classification Section of the ABS in Canberra.

INTRODUCTION

Purpose and Background

1. This document has been prepared to provide users of the Australian Standard Industrial Classification (ASIC) and users of statistics compiled in accordance with it with information on the nature and extent of the differences between the 1969 preliminary edition and the 1978 edition of the Classification. It illustrates the overall relationship and degree of alignment between the two editions of the Classification and also identifies the detailed differences in the definitions of individual classes.
2. The 1978 edition of the ASIC (Catalogue No. 1201.0) updates and replaces the 1969 preliminary edition of the Classification. It was prepared following an extensive review of the 1969 edition involving a substantial programme of empirical investigation and analytical work. The review took account of problems encountered with the preliminary edition of the ASIC, was cognisant of the changes in technology and products in the last decade and aimed at having the revised Classification reflect more realistically the current composition and structure of Australian industry. As a result of the review numerous changes have been made to the Classification, mainly affecting the definitions of industry classes and the composition of industry groups.

Number of Industries

3. As a result of the review the overall number of industries in the ASIC has increased. The number of subdivisions, groups and classes within each division is shown in the table below. (The corresponding number of the subdivisions, groups and classes in the previous (1969) edition of the ASIC is shown in brackets.)

Nature of the Key

4. The similarities and differences between the 1969 and 1978 editions of the ASIC are identified and presented in this key in three tables which contain the following information :

Table 1 : Broad alignment between ASIC divisions and subdivisions in the two editions of the Classification.

Table 2 : Broad alignment between ASIC groups and classes in the two editions of the Classification.

Table 3 : Detailed differences between the industry classes in the two editions of the Classification, in terms of those activities for which a change in ASIC treatment is documented. The detailed differences identified in Table 3 may be aggregated to determine the differences at the broader levels of the ASIC (i.e. at the ASIC group, subdivision and division levels).

Kinds of Changes to ASIC

5. The changes implemented in the 1978 edition of the ASIC were generally of the following kinds :
- i introduction of new industry classes formed by the splitting or amalgamation of industry classes which were in the 1969 preliminary edition of the Classification,
 - ii introduction of new industry groups formed by the splitting or amalgamation of industry groups which were in the 1969 edition of the Classification,
 - iii revisions to the definition of industry classes involving the transfer of primary activities from one industry class to another,
 - iv introduction of new primary activities in industry class definitions,
 - v deletion of some primary activity entries from industry class definitions in the 1969 preliminary edition of the Classification without usually involving the removal of the activities as such,
 - vi introduction of new codes for ASIC groups and classes,
 - vii treatment of Subdivision 99, Non-Classifiable Economic Units, as a separate division (Division M), and
 - viii adoption of new or revised generalised treatments for some broad types of activity such as repair, packing and installation.

Changes Not Covered by Tables 1 to 3

6. The kinds of changes described in i to vii above have been incorporated in the key. However, this could not be done for the kinds of changes mentioned in viii above. They relate to general rules for the treatment of particular types of activity and are therefore included in the ASIC introductory chapters rather than in individual class definitions.
7. The following provides a summary of the major differences in approach to the treatment of these activities :

- i Repair (including maintenance) and Installation

Activities which are not specified as primary activities of particular industry classes in the 1978 edition of the ASIC are to be referred to Classification Section for individual determination. Previously, repair, maintenance and installation activities which were not specified as primary activities of particular industry classes in the 1969 preliminary edition of the ASIC were treated as primary to the class in Division C, Manufacturing, which covered the manufacture of the goods being repaired or installed.

- ii Leasing

Apart from changes in the treatment of certain individual leasing activities (which are identified in Table 3), no change in the general approach with respect to the ASIC treatment of leasing/hiring activities has occurred.

- iii Packing

In the 1978 edition of the ASIC, two distinct categories of packing activity have been identified, namely captive packing and contract packing, and extensive rules/guidelines set down with regard to their treatment.

The treatment of captive packing, although not specifically identified in the 1969 preliminary edition of the ASIC, remains unchanged. (i.e. establishments which undertake captive packing activities continue to be classified in accordance with their main revenue earning activity.)

With regard to contract packing however, a major change in ASIC treatment has occurred with respect to the contract packing of goods whose manufacture is primary to industry classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34 inclusive within Division C, Manufacturing. According to the guidelines set down in the 1969 preliminary edition of the ASIC, contract packing of such goods was regarded as primary to the same industry classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34 as the manufacture of the goods being packed. In the 1978 edition of the ASIC a separate class (Class 6388) in Division I, Finance, Property and Business Services, has been created to cover establishments mainly engaged in these activities. This major change in approach is identified in Table 3.

Treatment of Sales of Goods Produced for the Selling
Establishment on Contract or Commission

In the 1969 edition of the ASIC establishments engaged in wholesale or retail trade which had goods manufactured for them on commission (e.g., establishments of oil marketing companies or of wholesale textile distributors, known as converters) had all such commission manufacturing done for them treated as manufacturing activity of the establishment if the establishment also carried out some manufacturing activity itself. If they were not engaged in manufacturing activity all their sales were treated, for classification purposes, as wholesale or retail sales, as appropriate.

In the 1978 edition of the ASIC the foregoing has been generalised and revised as follows:

Sales of goods produced for a 'client establishment' on a contract, commission or fee basis should normally be treated (for industry classification purposes) as sales of goods produced by the client establishment in the following conditions:

- (a) the contractor operates (i.e. has been engaged to operate) production facilities which the client establishment possesses on its premises,
- (b) the client establishment itself produces goods and the goods produced for it on contract, commission or for a fee are of a similar type or are goods produced from raw materials produced by the client establishment (provided the production of the raw materials is primary to the same ASIC division as the goods produced on commission from them), or
- (c) the goods produced for the client establishment on contract are construction goods, i.e. houses, other buildings or other structures, and the client establishment actively organises or manages the construction projects.
(Note: The terms 'organise' or 'manage' in this context refer to project management as specified in Division E, Construction, and do not mean mere inspection activities for the purpose of authorising payment to contractors or ensuring adherence to building regulations.)

Sales of goods produced for the 'client establishment' on a contract, commission or fee basis should be treated (for industry classification purposes) as wholesale or retail sales of the client establishment if the conditions in (a), (b) or (c) above do not apply.

8. A fuller description of the above activities is contained in Chapter 5 of the 1978 edition of the Australian Standard Industrial Classification (ASIC).

Changes to Code Numbers

9. The changes to the industry code numbers, mentioned in 5 vi above, have involved the following:
- i Previously hyphenated subdivision codes have been replaced by non-hyphenated codes.
 - ii Division and subdivision codes (in all other respects) have been retained. However, Subdivision 99, Non-Classifiable Establishments, previously part of Division L, has become a separate division with code M and has been retitled: Non-Classifiable Economic Units.
 - iii Previously hyphenated group codes have been replaced by non-hyphenated codes.
 - iv Where there was no choice but to reuse a previous group code to designate a different group the previous class codes within that group were not reused (if at all possible).
 - v New class codes have been used in all cases where the basic character or composition of the class had changed.
 - vi A previous code was never reused for a completely different class.
 - vii Most other group and class codes have also been replaced by new codes, regardless of whether the industries had undergone change or not. However, where the previous class code had been retained to designate the same class, care was taken to ensure that this occurred only in cases where the basic character or composition of the class had remained largely unchanged.

TABLE 1 : BROAD ALIGNMENT BETWEEN DIVISIONS AND SUBDIVISIONS

EXPLANATORY NOTES:

This table shows the broad alignment between the 1978 and 1969 editions of the ASIC at the ASIC Division and Subdivision levels.

The term "broad alignment" is used to indicate that the alignment shown is not necessarily an exact equivalence. The two most important factors affecting the extent of the equivalence are:

- 1 The movement of whole ASIC Groups or Classes between Divisions and Subdivisions of the ASIC. Such differences are identified in the footnotes to Table 1.
- 2 Changes in the ASIC treatment of certain activities, which may be identified from Table 3 "Detailed Differences Between Classes". These detailed differences at the ASIC Class level may be aggregated to the Subdivision or Division level as required.

Footnotes relating to Table 1 are given at the end of Table 1.

FOOTNOTES:

- (a) The alignment for ASIC Subdivision 01 Agriculture is between the 1978 ed. ASIC and the 1974 Interim Revised Subdivision 01.
- (b) The ASIC Class covering iron ore pelletising is included in Subdivision 11, Division B Mining in the 1978 ed. ASIC as Class 1112. This Class was previously included in Subdivision 29, Division C Manufacturing in the 1969 ed. ASIC as Class 2911.
- (c) A new Class 4248 Earthmoving and Dredging has been created in Subdivision 42 in the 1978 ed. ASIC. The activities included in this new Class were previously included in Class 4120 in Subdivision 41 of the 1969 ed. ASIC.
- (d) A new Class 6162 Holding Companies n.e.c. has been created in Subdivision 61, Division I Finance, Property and Business Services. Creation of this Class represents a change of a conceptual nature in the ASIC. Direct alignment with any 1969 ed. ASIC Class or set of Classes is therefore not possible.
- (e) A new Class 6388 Contract Packing Services n.e.c. has been created in Subdivision 63, Division I Finance, Property and Business Services in the 1978 ed. ASIC. The activities included in this new Class were previously included in the 1969 ed. ASIC in Classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34, Division C Manufacturing, according to the type of good being packed.
- (f) A separate Division (Division M), incorporating Subdivision 99 Non-Classifiable Economic Units has been created in the 1978 ed. ASIC. Subdivision 99 was included in Division L in the 1969 ed. ASIC.

EXPLANATORY NOTES:

This table shows the broad alignment between the 1978 and 1969 editions of the ASIC at the ASIC Group and Class levels.

The term 'broad alignment' is used to indicate that the alignment shown is not necessarily an exact equivalence i.e. detailed changes in the treatment of certain activities have not been taken into account. These detailed changes may however be identified by using the information given in Table 3 (Detailed Differences Between Classes). Although the detailed changes are identified only at the ASIC Class level they may be aggregated to the ASIC Group level if required.

- (a) The alignment for Subdivision 01 Agriculture is between the 1978 ed. ASIC and the 1974 Interim Revised Subdivision 01.
- (b) Multipurpose Farming (Group 015, Class 0150 in the 1974 Interim Revised Subdivision 01) no longer exists as a separate industry in the 1978 ed. ASIC. Establishments previously classified to this industry will now be classified in the normal manner according to their predominant activity.
- (c) The ASIC Class covering iron ore pelletising is included in Subdivision 11, Division B Mining in the 1978 ed. ASIC as Class 1112. This Class was previously included in Subdivision 29, Division C Manufacturing in the 1969 ed. ASIC as Class 2911.
- (d) Refers to part only of the Group listed i.e. not all of the Classes belonging to the Group listed. Parts of Classes, i.e. the activities which affect the alignment shown in Table 2 are, where relevant, identified in Table 3.
- (e) 1978 ed. ASIC Class 2883 is a new Class created by combining activities relating to the manufacture of glass wool and glass fibres (previously included in 1969 ed. ASIC Class 2813) with those relating to the manufacture of mineral wool and mineral wool products (previously included in 1969 ed. ASIC Class 2843). For details refer Classes 2850 and 2883 in Table 3 of this Key.

FOOTNOTES : - Contd

- (f) 1978 ed. ASIC Class 4248 is a new Class comprising activities relating to earthmoving and dredging which were previously included in 1969 ed. ASIC Class 4120. Refer Class 4248 in Table 3 of this Key for details. The appropriate alignment of Classes involving Class 4248 is:

1978 ed. ASIC Classes		1969 ed. ASIC Class
4121	} equal
4122		4120
4248

As a consequence, the alignment at the ASIC Group level would be:

1978 ed. ASIC Group		1969 ed. ASIC Group
412 plus	} equals

- (g) 1969 ed. ASIC Class 4812 no longer exists as a separate Class in the 1978 ed. ASIC. Establishments previously classified to this Class will now be classified in the normal manner according to their predominant activity. It is considered, however, that because of the nature of their operations, Variety Stores would more than likely be included in 1978 ed. ASIC Class 4815, as indicated in Table 2.
- (h) A more precise alignment of Classes involving 1969 ed. ASIC Class 4826 would be:

FOOTNOTES : - Contd

- (i) Because many of the Classes in Subdivision 61 have been extensively redefined, the broad alignment shown for Classes in Groups 615, 616 and 617 of the 1978 ed. ASIC (with the possible exception of Classes 6151, 6152 and 6161) should be treated with caution. It is suggested that the alignment shown should only be used in conjunction with reference to Volume 1 of the ASIC.
- (j) Class 6162 is a new Class in Division I of the 1978 ed. ASIC and its creation represents a change of a conceptual nature in the ASIC. Direct alignment with a Class or Classes in the 1969 ed. ASIC is not possible.
- (k) The ASIC treatment of certain contract packing activities has been revised and a new Class 6388 Contract Packing Services n.e.c. has been created in Division I of the 1978 ed. ASIC. This revision affects the definitional content of Classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34 (inclusive) in Division C. Details are provided in Class 6388 in Table 3 of this Key.
- (l) The alignment involving 1978 ed. ASIC Classes 8156 and 8157 in Table 2 is partial only. Details are provided in Table 3 of this Key.
- (m) Class 8235 Special Schools is a new Class in the 1978 ed. ASIC. Special schools were previously included in 1969 ed. ASIC Class 8217 Education n.e.c. The alignment involving 1978 ed. ASIC Class 8235 is:
- | | | |
|-----------------------|---------|-----------------------|
| 1978 ed. ASIC Classes | | 1969 ed. ASIC Classes |
| 8244 | } equal | (8215 |
| 8235 | | (8217 |
- (n) Subdivision 99 Non-Classifiable Economic Units was included in Division L in the 1969 ed. ASIC. This Subdivision has been incorporated in the new Division M in the 1978 ed. ASIC.

TABLE 3 : DETAILED DIFFERENCES BETWEEN CLASSES

EXPLANATORY NOTES:

This table identifies the differences between the industry classes of the 1978 edition of the ASIC and the broadly equivalent classes of the 1969 edition. The differences identified in Table 3 comprise those primary activities whose ASIC treatment according to the 1978 edition of the Classification differ from the treatment given in the 1969 edition of the Classification.

The table portrays the differences between the two editions of the Classification in terms of the following relationship:

$$1978 \text{ ED. ASIC CLASS} = 1969 \text{ ED. ASIC CLASS} + \text{OR} - \text{PRIMARY ACTIVITIES LISTED}$$

This means that a 1978 ASIC Class is portrayed as consisting of establishments mainly engaged in the same primary activities as those listed against the equivalent 1969 ASIC Class with the addition or exception of the specified primary activities. (It should be noted that in some cases the primary activity descriptions included in the table are not actual descriptions as used in either edition of the ASIC. This occurs, for example, where only part of a previously specified primary activity has been affected by a change in ASIC treatment.)

While no quantitative measures are provided on the changes identified in Table 3 it is possible, nevertheless, to assess the kinds of establishments that would be classified to a different industry on the basis of the changes in the definitional content of an ASIC Class. eg Table 3 indicates that 1978 ed. ASIC Class 3482 is equivalent to 1969 ed. ASIC Class 3442 except that establishments mainly engaged in manufacturing silver or gold plated cutlery (which would previously have been classified to 1969 ed. ASIC Class 3442) would now be classified to 1978 ed. ASIC Class 3161.

The detailed differences between ASIC Classes identified in Table 3 may be aggregated to determine the differences at the broader levels of the Classification (ie at the ASIC Group, Subdivision and Division levels).

The reference columns in this table provide information on the ASIC treatment of a listed primary activity in terms of both editions of the ASIC.

KEY BETWEEN THE 1978 AND 1969 EDITIONS OF ASICTABLE 3 : DETAILED DIFFERENCES BETWEEN CLASSES - ContdEXPLANATORY NOTES - Contd

The comments column includes, where appropriate, summary statements and other general comments which highlight the main definitional differences between two broadly aligned classes.

Changes to primary activities relating to Installation, Repair and Maintenance, Packing, Leasing and Hiring are only listed in Table 3 where these activities are specifically included in the list of primary activities of ASIC Classes in either edition of the Classification. Consequently, when assessing the overall difference between two broadly equivalent ASIC Classes in which these activities are not listed, reference should be made to the detailed explanation of their treatment as set out in Chapter 5 Volume 1 of both editions of the Classification.

Note that Table 3 is presented in double-page format and that primary activities, representing the differences between a particular 1978 and 1969 ed. ASIC Class, are listed as follows: "-" (minus) entries first (in alphabetical order) followed by "+" (plus) entries (in alphabetical order).

Footnotes relating to Table 3 are included at the end of the table.

ASIC Class are: 1. The exclusion from Class 3231 of the assembly of car type bodies on chassis which are not owned by the same enterprise - now included in 1978 ed. ASIC Class 3232 with similarly defined activities relating to trucks and buses; 2. The exclusion from Class 3231 of the manufacture of car type bodies - now included in 1978 ed. ASIC Class 3232 with the manufacture of truck and bus bodies and motor vehicle bodies built to customers specifications; 3. The inclusion in Class 3231 of the assembly of truck or bus bodies on chassis which are owned by the same enterprise - previously included in 1969 ed. ASIC Class 3212; 4. The inclusion in Class 3231 of the manufacture of motor vehicle parts and equipment (of the type covered by Class 3234) when undertaken in association with motor vehicle manufacture at the same establishment.

Three separate Classes 4121, 4122 and 4248 have been created in the 1978 ed. ASIC from 1969 ed. ASIC Class 4120 to cover road and bridge construction, non-building construction n.e.c. and earthmoving and dredging respectively.

The quarrying or road sub-base or fill, which was included in Class 4120 in the 1969 ed. ASIC, is now included in 1978 ed. ASIC Class 4121 when undertaken in conjunction with road construction and in 1978 ed. ASIC Class 1404 otherwise.

The quarrying of construction materials (other than road sub-base or fill), which was included in Classes 1401, 1402 and 1403 in the 1969 ed. ASIC is now included in the 1978 ed. ASIC in the appropriate classes in Div. E, when undertaken as an integral part of construction activities and in Classes 1401 and 1404 otherwise.

Note: The various activities relating to quarrying of construction materials (other than road sub-base or fill) have not been identified here but are listed against Classes 1401 and 1404 in Table 3. These activities,

KEY BETWEEN THE 1978 AND 1969 EDITIONS OF ASIC

TABLE 3 : DETAILED DIFFERENCES BETWEEN CLASSES - Contd

FOOTNOTES:

- (a) The presentation of the 'broad alignment' between the 1978 and 1969 ed. ASIC Classes in Table 3 may differ in some instances from that shown in Table 2. This is because Table 3 has been designed to show the changes relating to each individual 1978 ed. ASIC Class in terms of primary activities. As a consequence, 1969 ed. ASIC Class codes may be repeated in the broad alignment column in Table 3.
- (b) For ASIC Subdivision 01 Agriculture, the alignment in Table 3 is between classes in the 1978 ed. ASIC and classes in the 1974 Interim Revised Subdivision 01 (not the 1969 ed. ASIC).
- (c) Activities designated "+" are those which are regarded as being primary to the 1978 ed. ASIC Class but not primary to the equivalent 1969 ed. ASIC Class.
Activities designated "-" are those which are regarded as being primary to the 1969 ed. ASIC Class but not primary to the equivalent 1978 ed. ASIC Class.
(For ASIC Subdivision 01 Agriculture, the 1974 Interim Revised version applies in lieu of the 1969 ed. ASIC - see note (b) above).
- (d) The activity listed has been specified in the ASIC for the first time. No change in ASIC treatment is involved i.e. it has been determined that the activity listed would previously have been primary to the 1969 ed. ASIC Class indicated.
- (e) Activity description no longer specified in the ASIC. The reasons for deleting certain activity descriptions include; ambiguity in description; space constraints; relative insignificance of the activity; description redundant; or, ASIC treatment unresolved.
- (f) In the 1969 ed. ASIC, classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34 in Division C Manufacturing included contract packing services for a wide range of goods. The contract packing of a particular good in the 1969 ed. ASIC was regarded as being primary to the class which covered the manufacture of that good. In the 1978 ed. ASIC a separate class (Class 6388) has been created to cover the contract packing of goods whose manufacture is designated primary to classes in Subdivisions 23 to 34 inclusive.
- (g) Iron ore pelletising (1969 ed. ASIC Class 2911) is included in the 1978 ed. ASIC in Division B Mining as Class 1112.
